Basic WSH for healthcare workers

Healthcare workers work long hours and face challenges in coping in a fast-paced working environment to provide high service standards to patients. Hence, it is important that healthcare workers are aware of the safety and health hazards they may face at the workplace.

This e-learning module aims to provide healthcare workers with a basic understanding of WSH issues. Learn about the WSH Act and its regulations, common work hazards found in the healthcare industry and the control measures to mitigate them.

 Catalog: Musculoskeletal Disorders Awareness Course

Musculoskeletal disorders (MSDs) are disorders or illnesses of the hand, arm, neck, shoulder and back. They can cause discomfort, fatigue, pain, injury, and illness to workers and are one of the most common problems resulting in days away from work. They are a potential risk for all sectors and occupations and are commonly associated with manual lifting, carrying, pushing or pulling of heavy loads, over-exertion, awkward postures and repetitive actions or motions.

 Catalog: Safety First with Ken and Friends

Safety First with Ken and Friends is an online e-learning module targeted at students in the upper primary and lower secondary to learn more about safety not just in school, but also at home and at play. Through animation and interactive graphics, Ken and his friends will guide students to learn how to stay safe by making the right decisions, as well as pick up useful tips on how to prevent injuries and manage risks.
